In ſhort, the Man who ventures barely to recommend a GOOD TASTE, is gaz'd at as a Monſter, the Growth of another Clime! And, without Queſtion, we ſhould be glad of a new DON QUIXOTE to deſtroy him.
Preface to the Critical Review, &c.

THE Grub ſtreet Journal is a Paper that ow'd its whole Proſpect of Succeſs and Reputation, at its firſt Out ſet, to an Opinion, that was artfully circulated thro' the Town, that Mr. Pope and Dr. Arbuthnot were concern'd in it as Authors; and was tim'd ſo critically, in the Heat of the Dunciad Controverſy, as made that Opinion ſeem plauſible at leaſt: If it had not been for theſe Circumſtances in its Favour, we may boldly determine by its preſent Character, and the Reception it every where meets with, that it had never been regarded at all, but had periſh'd as irretrievably at firſt, as it muſt now unavoidably do, as ſoon as the Attention of the Publick is ſufficiently awaken'd in Favour of any Thing elſe in its Room. Nothing could have kept it alive ſo long, but the mere Love of Scandal, on which Frailty it has hitherto ſubſiſted, and the Hope of ſomething malicious one Week, to make Amends for the Dulneſs of another. Every Body knows that 'tis never call'd for, but on this Account; and every underſtanding Reader is diſappointed, if a chance Correſpondent helps out the poor hungry Author with a little running Senſe, to feed him for the Day. This I have done myſelf ſometimes, and bluſh at the Reflection of having ever mingled with ſuch wretched Company: And, tho' I mention it with true Penitence, I muſt make Uſe of the Circumſtance to inſinuate the Diſcernment and Impartiality of this Mr. Bavius, or Atticus, or whatever alias he is to be diſtinguiſh'd by; who concludes an Author, a Wit, or a Fool, a Man of Senſe, or a Mad-man, juſt as he writes in or out of his Paper.

I appeal to the whole Town, or at leaſt to that Part of it who have Patience enough to read that Paper, if the Character I have given it is not their genuine Sentiments; whether it is not read merely to fill up their Time at a Coffee Houſe, and then thrown down with the utmoſt Ignominy and Contempt, as a common abandon'd Proſtitute, is endur'd one Moment, and kick'd out of Doors the next. 'Tis plain therefore I don't declare this from any particular Spleen of my own, but as a juſt Recrimination, by way of Self-Defence: For, as in Juries that concern our Lives, we are at Liberty to ſet aſide thoſe whoſe Characters are too obnoxious to be entruſted, ſo, in Caſes that concern our Reputation, we may juſtly except to the Cenſure of thoſe who have none of their own to loſe, or, if they had, have not Genius or Knowledge enough to direct it with common Juſtice, Decency, or Propriety.

To make this appear yet more plain, let me call upon the Memory of every Perſon who has read this Paper from its Origin, to recollect if ever the Authors of it ſeem'd to underſtand what Senſe, Taſte, or Good Manners were; whether, by any of their Papers, they have ſo much as aim'd at the Improvement or Increaſe of either; whether they have ever diſcover'd Parts or Accompliſhments enough to ſet them equitably up as Cenſors and Reformers of other Men? Whether, therefore, they are any Way intitled to give themſelves the Airs of deciſive Criticks, or behave as the Houſe of Lords of Learning from whom there was no Appeal? I am poſitive of a general Negative to all theſe Queſtions, and that their Affectation and Arrogance will be condemn'd alike.

Now the Review of the Publick Buildings, &c. however it may be executed, and many other Papers, in the Weekly Regiſter, have been, and are viſibly calculated to anſwer the moſt reaſonable and elegant Purpoſes: To aſcertain what Taſte and Politeneſs mean, to make them both generally known and underſtood; to give the Publick a true Reliſh for them, to infuſe a Spirit of Generoſity and Magnificence thro' the Great; Senſe and Diſcernment in the Vulgar; to inform ſome, entertain all, and offend none: Theſe were the Views of a Paper that Meſſ. Bavius and Atticus have affected to repreſent as ſo abſurd, and to treat with ſuch Contempt; quite contrary to the Behaviour of ingenuous Minds, which are ever pleas'd with an Attempt to ſerve or pleaſe Mankind, and even when it fails, rather pity than inſult: This I know ſhould be my Behaviour to theſe Gentlemen, in Caſe they would give me an Opportunity: And, if ever I ſee them ſo much as blunder on any noble Deſign, I will be ſo far from expoſing their Inequality to the Undertaking, that I will aſſiſt and further them in it, to the utmoſt of my Power.

But, if the Review has not met with this Juſtice and Openneſs from the Authors of the Grub-ſtreet Journal, I muſt acknowledge both, with the higheſt Gratitude to the Publick in general; who have been ſo good as to receive my Labours in the moſt indulgent Manner. They have found Admittance into the Studies of the moſt Knowing, and have entertain'd thoſe of the higheſt Rank: They have been made the Converſation of the politeſt Companies, have been ſometimes prais'd, ſeldom cenſur'd, and always acquitted with Honour: Let me be forgiven, if, thus attack'd, I preſume a little more than I would otherwiſe do; this very Pamphlet has been father'd on ſome of the nobleſt and moſt eminent Names in the Kingdom, and, tho' I am overlook'd in the Application, I can eaſily forgive the involuntary Injury when 'tis attended with ſo high a Compliment.

As therefore this little Eſſay has met with ſuch ſincere and univerſal Approbation, and thoſe, who have attack'd it, are of ſo little Importance, I might have been very reaſonably excus'd, for not taking the leaſt Notice of the frivolous Objections that have been made to it; but, as I deſign to carry on my Studies on theſe Subjects much farther, I think it not improper to clear the Way as I go, and leave my Adverſaries no Plea for any future Oppoſition: Not that I intend to throw away my Time in Controverſy, for, at preſent, I have no Thoughts of replying any more, unleſs I ſhould meet with more candid and experienc'd Antagoniſts; or ſhould be arraign'd of real Faults, that it would be but juſt to acknowledge and amend: Which, as I have frequently declar'd, I ſhall be always ready and willing to do.

To proceed then with Atticus, as I did with the Author of the Weekly Miſcellany, I ſhall print his Letter in one Column, my Anſwer in the other, and leave the Reader to be Judge between us.

GRUBSTREET JOURNAL.

SIR,

"I Don't know whether I am not attempting ſomething out of Courſe, when I am "ſending you a Remark or two, upon one of your Brother Weekly Journaliſts. "But upon reflecting, that the Hyp-Doctor and the Bee have ſometimes fallen under your "Conſideration, I fancy, that you are equally concerned to expoſe Enormities, or Affectations of any Kind, wherever you meet with them.

"In The Weekly Regiſter, for ſome Time paſt, the World (I mean that Part of the "World which reads that Paper) has been amuſed with A Survey of the Publick Buildings, &c. which has been reprinted in a Pamphlet by itſelf.

"In this Performance, the Writer has given us his Opinion of every Thing material "in Town; and diſcovers in his laborious Survey juſt as much Skill in Architecture, as "is about ſufficient to qualify a Man for a Free Maſon.

meant a Reflection: At all Events, as he deſign'd to repreſent me ignorant, he ſhould recommend himſelf.

"The favourite unmeaning Terms of Art (which all Sciences have, more or leſs, but "which ought to be ſpared as much as poſſible, when we are talking to the World in ge"neral) does he hack about, without any Mercy. Whatever pleaſes him, which is indeed "very little, is ſure to be happy in its Effect, and to keep a right Appearance in Proſpect; "or, what he ſeems moſt immoderately fond of, preſerves a fine Keeping. With a "Dozen of theſe Terms, and a very projecting Head, he proceeds upon his Survey: "Is pleaſed with ſuch a Building, diſlikes another; knocks down a whole Street, to open "a Viſta; removes this Church; brings another Building half a Mile to ſet in its room; "which, when he has placed it there, has an infinitely better Effect.

"But tho' I cannot acquit him of Trifling, in this Way of Amuſement, which pro"perly falls under the Denomination of building Caſtles in the Air; yet, I am ſenſible, "tho' it be not a profitable, it is a very innocent Pleaſure: And does no Harm to any "Thing but the Brain of the Projector. Nor can his ſevere Cenſures upon ſeveral "Buildings and Tombs, &c. probably have any other Effect; ſince I am inclinable to "think, the Erectors will not pay that Deference to his Anathema, as to pull down, or "new model any of them.

WEEKLY REGISTER.

TO put the Week's Regiſter on a Level with the Hyp Doctor and the Bee, is an Enormity that an honeſt Man would have been aſham'd of, and an Affectation that a Man of Wit need not have had Recourſe to.

If Mr. Atticus means by this to reflect on the Readers of the Weekly Regiſter, he has made a Reflection himſelf; for if he had never read it, he could hardly have undertook to anſwer it: If not, his Parentheſis is indeed ſuperfluous, and might better have been ſpar'd.

As I am not a Brother among the Free Maſons, I can't tell how far this is a Reflection on my Knowledge in Architecture: If he is, he is fallen into his own Snare a ſecond Time. If not, he cenſures at Random, and may make a Compliment, where he methinks have produc'd ſome Proofs of it; if he had hop'd to expoſe me effectually or

Terms of Art, I am pretty confident, are unmeaning to him; and therefore he ſhould have lik'd this Pamphlet ſo much the more: For 'tis univerſally confeſt that nothing, on ſuch a Subject, ever was incumber'd with ſo few: Thoſe, which are us'd, are abſolutely neceſſary, and, unleſs our wiſe Critick can prove they are miſapply'd, or will ſubſtitute better in their Stead, I ſhall hardly repent of uſing them; tho' his Remark had been pointed with more Wit, than ſeems to fall to his Share.

This Article might have been ſpar'd, with all its ridiculous Embelliſhments, if Mr. Atticus had only recollected the following Paſſage, and many others, in the Review. I am very far from expecting, or even imagining that any of theſe Alterations will ever come to paſs: I mention them only to explode the miſerable Taſte of our Anceſtors, who neglected, or did not underſtand thoſe Beauties, and that their Deſcendants may grow wiſer at their Expence, and prevent the like Cenſure from falling upon them.

[Price THREE HALF-PENCE.]

N. B. Advertiſements, of a reaſonable Length, are put in this Paper at Two Shillings and Six-Pence each.

" But when he extends his Criticiſm in Architecture to ſeveral private Houſes, and " condemns and pulls down at Will, he muſt excuſe me, if I think, that he encroaches " a little too much upon the Poſſeſſor's Property. It is ſomewhat hard, that a Noble- " man or Gentleman cannot lay out ſix or eight thouſand Pounds of his own upon a " Houſe for himſelf, and in laying it out, execute two or three of his own Whims, " (which tho' they may not be ſtrictly agreeable to true Taſte, yet hit his own) but " ſome Critic muſt immediately ſtigmatize him in Print for it. In the Weekly Regiſter " of March 30, the Writer has indirectly done this; for tho' the Builder is made " the principal Butt of his Cenſure, yet we ſee it extends to the Purchaſers. Says he, " ſpeaking of Groſvenor Square, The triple Houſe, of the North Side, is a wretched " Attempt at ſomething extraordinary, but I hope not many People, beſide the Pur- " chaſers, are deceived in their Opinions of its Merits. There can be no Plea remain- " ing for the Project, unleſs the View of taking in ſome young Heir, to buy it, at a " great Rate, may be allowed one.——I would aſk, Whether this is not a Reflection " on thoſe that have purchaſed it? Beſides, this mighty Judge has been a great deal " more ſevere than the Occaſion required, even if this triple Houſe had been ſubmitted " to his Cenſure ——For, conſidering it diſtinct from the Square, there is nothing " ſhocking or deformed in it.

than my Opponent has us'd to me; and, with what Views only may be ſeen by the Dedication of the Review. But as few have a like Talent (with Lord Burlington) of laying out their Fortunes with Propriety, or making their own private Judgment a publick Ornament, I have ventur'd to warn them of the Danger of attempting what they are not equal to, or declaring their Weakneſs at their own Expences, &c.

" I cannot help wondering, how this great Adept in Building came to be ſo over- " ſeen, as to cloſe this Survey with a Blunder, of which no Artiſt, unleſs loſt and bu- " ried in Thought and Projection, could have been guilty. I have often wondered, " ſays he, that, in the Number of Squares, which adorn this City, no Builder ever " thought of an octangular one; I am fully perſuaded, that it would make a nobler Fi- " gure than any we have ſeen yet, and is capable of greater Beauties. Then he pro- " ceeds to tell us, how he would contrive this ſame octangular Quadrangle or Square; " ——Here, he would have an Arch; and there ——. But he would have the Super- " ſtructure elevated in a grand and noble Style, ſo as to prove one of the moſt magnificent " Ornaments in the World. Page 109, 110. I am,

Your conſtant Reader and humble Servant,

ATTICUS.

At laſt this ingenious Critick has found out a real Overſight, an Error in Terms, an octangular Square! Why, I confeſs it; and now where's the mighty Triumph? I might have ſaid Area, inſtead of Square, or recollected a Variety of Terms beſide; but, as Mr. Atticus himſelf obſerves, I was ſo buried in Thought and Projection, that I never ſo much as ſaw the Blunder I was guilty of. But, however, if this Gentleman was a perfect Critick, as he would be thought, I ſhould think his not being able to point out any material Error but this, a very great Compliment: As it is, I am afraid 'tis owing to his want of Diſcernment, and not any Accuracy of mine that he has found no more.

This Article on private Property, ſeems to have the greateſt Weight of any of this Author's Objections, and yet he is not aware that, if there is any Thing in it at all, it reflects as ſtrongly on him as me, and puts an End to Criticiſm of all Kinds at once. Is not the Pamphlet I have lately publiſh'd my Property? And, if it has not coſt me ſix or eight thouſand Pounds, it may contain half the Study of my Life, and be the Ground-Work of all my future Subſiſtence, for what he can tell: An Article of as much Conſequence to me, as a large Sum of Money to any Nobleman or Gentleman whatever; and yet he has not ſcrupled to invade this Property of mine in the moſt dogmatical and arbitrary Manner, tho' contrary to his own expreſs Principles. For my Part now, I am ſo far from being an Enemy to this Freedom, with Reſpect to myſelf, that I have expreſly ſaid in one of my late Papers, That any Artiſt who falls under my Examination, is expected to make Reprisals: That is to ſay, that he would ſet me right, if I ſhould cenſure him in the wrong Place, and inform me better, if I ſhould recommend any Thing for a Beauty that did not deſerve that Name. To this let me add, that whoever aims, in any Light, or at any Expence to procure publick Applauſe, will lie as open, if he miſcarries, to publick Cenſure; and indeed, without this Liberty, Taſte and Elegancy would ſoon be heard of no more. I can only ſay for myſelf, 'tis a Liberty I allow to others; and will take myſelf, tho' I ſhall ever uſe it with more Decency and Moderation

FOREIGN NEWS.

Warſaw, May 8. N. S.

THE Ruſſian Troops quarter'd here are embark'd for Dantzick, there are left only 1200 Men for the Security of the Town and Caſtle, and about 500 Saxons for the Defence of the Palace. The ſaid Troops are commanded by General Lubras, who was ſome Time ſince put under an Arreſt by Order of the Ruſſian Court. Several Perſons of Diſtinction have been ſeiz'd here, on Suſpicion of holding Correſpondence with the oppoſite Party, on which Account great Numbers of People remove from hence daily.

From the Camp before Dantzick, May 20. On the 10th we received Advice, that ſome of the French Tranſports were arrived in the Road; whereupon we ſet Fire to all the Villages along the Sea-Coaſt, as the General had formerly threaten'd; the next Day 7 or 8 of thoſe Ships landed their Troops at Fort Wechſelmunde, which made us double our Hands at Work in barricading the Viſtula: We drew ſeveral large Cables croſs that River, to obſtruct the Paſſage of ſmall Boats; we made a Communication with our Intrenchment near Fort Somerſchantz, by throwing a Bridge over the Canal of Bootſmanſlache; we clos'd up the Gate of the ſaid Fort toward Wechſelmunde, and open'd a new one on the Side of the Terra-firma; we perfected the Line of Circumvallation which had been drawn near Fort Wechſelmunde, to ſtop any Succour that might attempt to come that Way, and run up two Redoubts on the Sea ſhore. Mean while we continued to bombard and cannonade the City, but the Enemy ſlacken'd their Fire. On the 12th and 13th we improv'd our Work. On the 14th Priſoners were exchang'd on each Side. The French, who had landed to the Number of 1500 Men, reimbark'd the ſame Day, and put back to Sea. On the 16th the Enemy made a Sally upon our Line at Stoltzenberg, but were ſoon oblig'd to retire, without effecting any Miſchief to our Works. On the 17th we detach'd a Party of Horſe, who advanc'd to the very Counterſcarp of Fort Wechſelmunde; we drew out our Men likewiſe from the Trenches, in Order to alarm the Enemy, and ſee if any of the French Troops remain'd in the Fort, but none appear'd: Theſe Trenches are extremely well fortify'd, being cover'd with Redoubts and Demi-baſtions, from the Viſtula to the very Sea, and we can't conceive that there is any Danger of the French penetrating that Way to Dantzick, ſhould they think proper to return; we have alſo thrown up a Redoubt on this Side the Viſtula, and drawn a Line of Circumvallation from it to the River; we are buſy in carrying on the Works for an Attack near Algottſengel, over-againſt Schiedlietz, and towards Biſſchofberg. The Enemy having ſet Fire to all the Houſes upon the Stolzenberg, on the other Side our Poſts, the poor Inhabitants were forced to abandon all their Effects, and fly to us for Refuge. The Bombarding goes on as uſual, but the Enemy's Fire grows leſs and leſs every Day.

Vienna, May 19. They write from Conſtantinople, that Thamas Kouli Kan has gain'd a new Victory over the Turks, is become Maſter of Babylon, and was moreover making Preparations to march his Army towards Syria, in Order to conquer that Province.

Franckfort, May 27. According to all Appearance the Siege of Philipſburg will be puſh'd with great Vigour, and the Place defended with Courage. On the 23d it was inveſted by the French Troops, and the next Day the Marquis of Aſfeld, who has the Command, ſent a Trumpet to acquaint Count Wuttgenau the Governor, That he gave him till To-morrow to ſurrender; but in caſe of Refuſal, the Fortreſs, with its Garriſon and Inhabitants, ſhould be treated with the utmoſt Rigour of War, and that no Capitulation ſhould be granted them. The Count anſwer'd, That far from having a Thought to ſurrender, both himſelf and his Garriſon were reſolv'd to defend the Place to the laſt Drop of Blood. The Count de Belliſle is to aſſiſt the Marquis Aſfeldt in the Siege of Philipſburg. Thoſe Generals are to carry on their Attacks in two different Places at once.

From the Imperial Camp at St. Benedetto, May 16. Our Troops have poſſeſs'd themſelves of one of the Enemy's Bridges near Colorno. Our Army is on the Point of breaking up their Camp: 'Tis thought we ſhall march next into the Modeneze, in Order to penetrate into the Dutchy of Parma.
